

This is too much. After Sinclair Broadcasting last week, this week brings up another corporate giant abusing its FCC license.

Pappas Telecasting Company is donating $325,000 in airtime to Republican candidates.

Like Sinclair, Pappas Broadcasts under an FCC license "for the public good." Using its FCC license for partisan politics is an abuse of the license. If Pappas wants to donate air time, it must, under FCC guidelines, donate equally to candidates of any party. I include Green Party, Libertarians, and etc.

Unless my understanding of the scope of an FCC license is completely wrong, Pappas' actions are legally questionable. They certainly cast doubt on whether Pappas truly intends to serve the public interest.

Pappas, like Sinclair, is proving that media regulations need to be tightened, not loosened, to keep our media free and balanced. A free country is dependent on a free and balanced media.

Please take into consideration Pappas' action here when considering renewal of its FCC license. I believe Pappas is acting in abuse of its license and should not be renewed.

Sincerely,
